

Articles: Arts

Fall Arts Preview

This fall, it's all about art that's just as paranoid, horny and hungry as you are

by David Wildman and Justin Becker

Issue 8.39

Wed, September 27, 2006

YOSHU LI + STEVE LOCKE | RHYS GALLERY | 10.4–10.29

Currently, Steve Locke is best known for his cock rings. After this show, he'll probably be known for his tongue. RHYS Gallery, the latest South End gallery to pop up next to the Pine Street Inn, is featuring Locke's Tongue Paintings, new oil works that reportedly continue the artist's fascination with masculine performance and how guys hook up. He's also launching a series of six panels of drawings on Mylar that will be on display in the windows facing Harrison Avenue, providing a sophisticated backdrop for those pissing themselves across the street. Youshi Li is a painter whose realm is the surreal and the vulgar. [401 Harrison Ave., Boston. 617.357.7497. rhysgallery.com]